SMITH CEMETERY (1)

Plain Township, Franklin County, Ohio

This little cemetery is in the northeast quarter of Plain Township, about two miles south of the Franklin-Delaware county line, and less than a mile west of the Franklin-Licking county line. It is on the west side of the New-Albany Johnstown Road (62). The land was given by John Smith for cemetery purposes, and his burial in the spring of 1814 was the first one in the plot. He was a soldier of the American Revolution, as was also John Clouse who is buried here, and John Wetherholt whose grave is thought to be close to that of his wife Nancy. All legible inscriptions were copied December 3, 1948.

THOMPSON

In memory of Catharine, wife of John Thompson, died June 11, 1829, aged 22 Y 11 M 22 D

WETHERHOLT

In memory of Nancy, Wife of John Wetherholt, Who Departed this life

- - - - - 18 - - - - -

(The upper part of this sandstone slab shows the inscription very clearly, but imperfections and weathering have entirely obliterated most of the figures of the inscription)

Between the graves of Nancy and Elisha Wetherholt is a wide space in which there was formerly a broken stone on which the name of John Wetherholt could be read, but not the dates. This stone is now entirely gone. It is thought that this was the grave of the John Wetherholt who was a soldier of the American Revolution.

In memory of Elisha Wetherholt who Departed this life - - - - - 1837?

- - - - - (A much weathered stone, but in a favorable light this much of the inscription can be made out)

Apparently there are graves here without any markers, perhaps some never had any.

The earliest dated stones found are those of Esther Goodrich, Jan. 13, 1821; Mark Evans, June 12, 1821; and Katharine Daniel, Dec. 9, 1821. The latest date of death found is that of Jacob Bevolheimer, Dec. 12, 1880. Many of the same family names are to be found in Fancher Cemetery, about three miles northwest, and the New Albany Cemetery, about a mile and a half south, both of which are still in use.

TWELVE CORNERS CEMETERY (1)

Monroe Township, Licking County, Ohio .

This is a small cemetery on the south side of the New Albany-Johnstown Road (Route 62) about two miles southwest of Johnstown. At this point two other roads cross the highway in such a way as to leave a small triangle at the intersection, thus forming twelve corners. The graveyard is in the corner farthest southwest, and is about four miles northeast of the Smith Cemetery in Plain Township, Franklin Co. It appears that burials are still occasionally made in Twelve Corners Cemetery, and it is in fairly good condition. On April 17, 1948, all legible stones were copied.
